Dear Investor

Changes to your Threadneedle investment

We are writing to you as a shareholder in one or more of the funds of Threadneedle Investment Funds ICVC to inform you of a new deferred redemption policy effective from 1 August 2014.

What is the new policy?

The new policy relates to redemptions from a fund (i.e. the sale of shares in a fund by the shareholder). It will mean that when Threadneedle receives requests to redeem more than 10% of the shares of its funds, we may choose to defer redemptions of the affected fund to the next valuation point. This will help ensure the sale of sufficient assets in the fund, so that we can adequately meet our clients' redemption requests.

How does it work?

The redemption policy is precautionary and part of Threadneedle's wider liquidity management programme across its range of ICVC funds. In times of high levels of redemption, it is important that we can effectively protect the interests of continuing shareholders in the funds. Putting in place the deferred redemption policy enables Threadneedle, as authorised corporate director ("ACD") to defer all redemptions from a fund at any valuation point to the next valuation point where redemption requests exceed 10% of the relevant fund's value. This enables us to more easily match the sale of a fund's investments to the level of redemptions received, and should reduce the impact of dilution (i.e. costs of dealing) on the affected fund and its continuing shareholders. Full details of the procedures for application of the policy are set out in the prospectus.
